

Hospitality Committee

What We Do: We are one of the formal faces of RPCN, often responsible for first impressions. At live and virtual events, we welcome and engage with guests and new members to understand their personal and business interests so we can assist with valued connection and resources. Our other responsibilities are to track attendance and where applicable, collect event fees.

How You Can Help: We need members with a curious and friendly nature that can get strangers to open-up about their needs so you can quickly make quality hand-offs to fellow RPCN members. On occasion, you may be asked to call a guest or new member to ensure that their first engagement with RPCN has served them well. We also need focused/detailed people who enjoy seeing that proper processes are followed to collect money and record accurate attendance. As we host many events and programs, it would be beneficial to have a couple folks in each role to keep a light load for all our committee members.

How You Benefit: You will be highly connected to both RPCN and Non-RPCN attendees ensuring the greatest exposure of both your personal brand and your business. You will improve or refine your rapid bonding and rapport/public relations skills. Your efforts will play an essential role in acquiring new members as well as improving future guest experiences. In summation: your efforts are a key to a healthy and growing RPCN, and your business.
